

Employee Justice.

Gail A. Glick

BIOGRAPHICAL INFORMATION

Gail Glick has been litigating employment disputes in Los Angeles since 1994. She and her partners have founded the AK+G partnership with a continued commitment to the exclusive representation of employees in all aspects of employment law disputes and resolutions. Since 2002, Gail has focused her practice on representing employees in employment discrimination and retaliation, wrongful termination, defamation, unfair competition and wage and hour law. Gail's warm nature, writing acumen and attention to detail are particular assets to the partnership.

Gail has represented a wide variety of workers, including artists, bookkeepers, CEOs, CFOs, comptrollers, clerical employees, delivery persons, entertainment executives, factory workers, finance professionals, grips, human resource professionals, investment professionals, lawyers, librarians, managers, mariners, orthopedists, ophthalmologists, pharmacists, pharmaceutical sales representatives, plumbing sales representatives, professors, psychologists, registered nurses, respiratory therapists, retail managers, rocket scientists, salespersons, social workers, teachers, videographers, waiters, and waitresses.

Gail prides herself on her ability to pursue each case with a sensitivity to the unique needs of each of her clients. When appropriate, she aggressively litigates with a view toward a trial. In other instances, her training and experience in mediating disputes allows her to effectively represent her clients with a conciliatory approach. She has achieved numerous six and seven figure settlements without the necessity of trial.

From 1995 through the summer of 2002, Gail focused her practice on the representation of defendants. She defended employers in all aspects of employment law disputes at the firms of Reish Luftman McDaniel & Reicher (2001–2002) and at Musick, Peeler & Garrett LLP (1995–2001). She spent her first year of practice at the small Westside litigation firm that is now known as Silver & Field.

In 2006, Gail honed her trial advocacy skills in the prestigious Trial Advocacy Project (“TAP”) of the Los Angeles County Bar Association and tried three cases to unanimous guilty verdicts for the Long Beach Prosecutor’s Office.
